

The Raven Foundation seeks to make religion reasonable, violence unthinkable and peace a possibility. By entering into the conversations taking place in the arts, entertainment and wider culture around war and peace, violence, identity and desire, we hope to challenge conventional wisdom and open pathways to authentically peaceful communities.

As playwright George Bernard Shaw said, “We use a mirror to see our faces. We use the arts to see our souls.” With the presentation of the first Raven Award for Excellence in Arts and Entertainment to Lookingglass Ensemble member Heidi Stillman, we honor an artist who allowed us a glimpse of our souls with her brilliant adaptation of Fyodor Dostoevsky’s, The Brothers Karamazov, performed in November 2008 at the Lookingglass Theatre.

“There is a web of interconnectedness and responsibility that we have for each other, and it starts at the very beginning of life. We each hold the power to change life for each other, for the good or the bad.”

~ Alyosha in The Brothers Karamazov by Heidi Stillman
